

Hey again, J-Smeezy. 😊 Actually, I like the switch from Jonny to Jazzy. It has pizzazz. I'm not entirely sure what to make of your comments this time. I guess I'll just say, re. the comically lengthy sentence... well, it says an awful lot more about the state of our punishment system than about me. Of course it would've been infinitely shorter if I'd bent over for them and pled guilty; in fact, I'd likely be home by now. But you don't say you're guilty when you're not, you know? My integrity has value, and so do my friends' lives. To you though, I'm sorry you were caged for so long, but I'm happy you came out of it alright and feel like the scales of justice are balanced now. That sense of fairness and right is important to all of us, I believe. I know it's what motivates me.

As for the length of my replies... well, I think it's important to be thorough. I think misunderstandings, misrepresentations, and mistaken facts can only be cleared up through full and genuine communication. So, sometimes I'll go that extra mile. Injustice seems to thrive on quick judgements and brief statements. Take care of yourself, man. I hope you're well.
