

He who has a "why" to live for can bear with almost any "how".
2/2/13

Young Will ~ Happy Birthday, bud. I pray all is well, and your special day ushers in much joy to your life son.

I've been looking for your reply to my 1-16 blog to you regarding the N. Dakota job opportunities and all... but it recently took more than three weeks for me to receive a message from Yashua, so I will patiently await word from you.

I'm posting a few old happy-snaps for you to enjoy and share. I sent a few in my blog to Yash a couple days ago you can check out too. I am so glad that I have all these to share with you all. Brandon still hasn't returned the 10-15 I had sent out with him to copy for you guys — so you might want to mention that to him if you never got the copies he promised.

How is Jade and Haven doing? I sincerely pray that all is working out for you all. I'm here to tell you that your family is everything in this world — which you certainly know better than most! You've got an awesome heart William, and I'm sure a little patience and understanding is all that is needed this Valentine's Day. I always wish you all the best son. Be blessed.

