P.S. I forgot to conclude on the bottom of page 1 of that article that my mom falsely say I confessed to him. I had sex with a guy I was in jail with so

Thanks for your lengthy transcription of my post about being maliciously misdiagnosed as a psychopath (BTB staff neglected to file it as a Blog for Human Rights, as I noted on it's upper left corner). My ire + heavy work load (e.g. was doing a fed. appellate brief, writing autobio, etc.) impaired me from articulating myself as well as I could've.

A true psychopath can't feel empathy. An fMRI will show that their medial prefrontal cortex (mpfc) is barely active, at best, compared to a healthy person's mpfc; but a healthy person's mpfc becomes as inactive as a psychopath's mpfc when that healthy person is dealing with someone deemed socially unpopular (e.g. "ugly" people, homeless people... prisoners). (See David Eagleman's The Brain, episode 5, a PBS series) I suspect that testing will show that a soldier's mpfc acts like a psycho's mpfc when a soldier is in combat with an enemy, same for a judge who's sentencing a defendant to death or a long sentence. In those moments the soldier + judge become psychopathic, even if they aren't full-blown psychopaths

It's amazing to me how the judge, who's surely highly educated + at least familiar with psychology doesn't realize they're projecting their psycho.

Soldiers are trained by the military + judges are trained by law schools, the legislature, etc. to not empathize with their enemies but to kill or torture (by prison conditions) them, but that doesn't make them psychopaths.

Maybe the condition could become permanent, due to habituation, so they can't empathize with anyone, which might explain the vet who recently killed 5 cops in Dallas....

Life can train someone to be ~~a~~ psychopathic if society doesn't intend so. An abusive home, system, ostracism by peers, no hope of a good life coincidence that most prisoners experienced too, even a calloused - it's no these things.

Many of my blog posts show that the system has done is best to train me to be a psychopath. Dr. Satter's misdiagnosis is merely the culmination.

"If you build it, it will be."

Consider the reply to my psych. request on page 2, the other side of this paper.

 OTHER: I posted an expose of Dr. Salter's crap on my blog; soon one about Dr. Johnston's Narcissist crap will be posted. Enjoy

FOLD THIS REQUEST OVER TO THE LINE BELOW SO THAT INFORMATION REMAINS CONFIDENTIAL

DO NOT USE THIS FORM IF YOUR MENTAL HEALTH NEED IS AN EMERGENCY, SPEAK TO STAFF DIRECTLY. IN THE LINED AREA BELOW, WRITE DOWN WHAT YOUR REQUEST IS ABOUT. BE AS SPECIFIC AS YOU CAN.

Dr. Hoem: Tell me about Iatrogenic diagnoses. Then tell me why so many WDOC psychologists facilitate that phenomenon. You said Dr. Salter is "pretty tough" You know, I can be pretty tough too.'s So let me know if you'd prefer that I'm pretty tough or pretty decent, & the administration should let me know the same.

Your comrades who use their authority, they ain't gettin' a pass from me. I'll get tough on their crimes just like they want to get tough on mine.

RESPONSE

- A psychology appointment is scheduled for the following time frame: 1-2 weeks
 Your request has been referred to the Psychiatrist within the Health Service Unit
 Your request has been referred to the Health Services Unit for medical issues
 Refer for a record review appointment or for copies only. (Must be processed within 30 days of request)

Other: It generally refers to medical conditions but I see your reference and misdiagnosis resulting in improper treatment would apply. As you already know - I prefer "pretty decent!" See ya soon.
