Hello, Welcome to my blog. Before I Commence with this letter, I would like to thank Between The Bars for allowing me the opportunity to set up my own blog. Personally? I love writing and corresponding with people from all walks of life, so the main purpose of my blog is to establish a steady flow of positive feed-back, and to maintain social contacts — one of the focal points of Between The Bars. My name is Danny Joe Garrett, but those who know me well call me by my nick-name, 'Lefty'. I'm 33 years old originally from Chicago, but I've spent the last 15 years and 6 months incarcerated for armed robbery. I currently reside in the Wisconsin Department of Corrections, a place we know as prison. Indeed, I make no excuses for my actions and I take full responsibility for what I've done. I believe that in order for a person to become rehabilitated — one must own up to one's actions and not point fingers at someone else for being in prison. Early in my incarceration I blamed everyone around me (Family & Friends) for being in prison, but the more I reflected on the situation, the more realized that it was I to blame. It's essential for those who read this to know that I'm not a person of self pity, I don't go around feeling sorry for myself — I'm more into trying to improve on myself as a man and restoring the rights of those people I've violated. Anytime you commit a crime against a person you are violating that person's rights. I can't change the past, but I do hope to utilize the experience I acquired in prison, to help bring about some good in troubled youths because I once was a trouble youth. Once I'm out, (God-willing) I would like to start a non-profit organization for Trouble Youths. If anyone have any tips on how to get a non-profit organization off the ground please share your ideas with me. God-willing, it is my intentions to let those who read my blog, to see who I'm really am as a person and that includes sharing personal things about myself with my readers. I have nothing to hide and I'm looking forward to meeting new friends!!

Thank you for your time and patience
