

Hey, well I figured I would give you all some good news for once. The first lawsuit I filed AGAINST the Texas Prison industry is finally going to court. I got mail today showing the dates for APPEARANCES, however all of my legal books have miraculously disappeared since all this shit with the white power gangs has kicked off. Oh well I haven't ever learned how to quit. I'd like to talk about all these ideologies going on and what it means to me. If you have come across a belief which solidifies your life, something that truly touches your soul, then dedicate yourself to it. Whatever it is, if your religious doctrine states that your religion is the only true one, then stick to it. If you believe the white race is supreme to all others, hold strong. If you believe that homosexuality is an aberration to natural life, okay. If you believe that all governments are evil, and are trying to enslave all of mankind, stay strong. If you believe the black people of the world are mistreated and down trodden, do something. If you believe the environment of our world is in danger from industry and that our children are in danger of suffering, stand up. Whatever it is you believe, please just stick to it. Learn everything you can about it and with the internet that's everything. Then don't weaken on your beliefs, it aggravates the hell out of me when someone fanatics about any issue and then do the things that contradictive to their beliefs. If you are a white supremacist, what are you doing interacting with the other races and I mean at all, in any way. If you really believe that yours is the only true religion why are you granting the other religions any kind of recognition. It's just crazy for anyone to claim a hard core belief to flip flop on their core beliefs. If you are an anarchist you shouldn't be doing anything in anyway to support any government. If you are an environmentalist why are you driving a car or purchasing any items which are produced by companies that pollute in any way. If you feel the Israelis are committing atrocities against the Palestinians find a way to protect them. There is nothing worse than a fanatic who hasn't taken the time to learn everything about his beliefs, unless it's someone who is a half ass believer, this person weakens the entire movement. I do not believe any of the above things and I'm dedicated enough to fight for my beliefs no matter the odds or popularity. You all take care. Peace & Donny.
