

Dragging A Love

Time has passed and my thoughts have shifted though my feelings and my love hasn't changed
Your mere presence was good for my soul, sometimes,
Amongst some other things.

We laughed, talked and gazed into each others eyes
Never once mistaking the love that we harboured inside
Even if we wanted to hide in our own special place
Everyone could find it, written all over our face

7 years!! Babygirl, yes time has passed us by
So many nights I've lain awake wondering to myself, why?
Or if we ever crossed paths again will she give it another try?
Some questions don't have answers, only actions that solidly

A promise made, a promise broke and a heart to match it too
No matter what your lie may be, I'll never stop loving you

Now sitting here pouring it out, sitting here on this stool
Wondering how long it will be this time before you have me looking like a fool

A funny kind of love we share
Consummated with only touches, stares and stares
But it's real, no doubts at all, it's real!
