

Dear Reader,

5-24-11

I am sitting here writing this entry only because I've been blessed with a fresh breath and a new day in life. Though, I'm not perfect nor will I ever be but one thing I've learned is to never take life for granted and to count my blessings each day.

Here lately I've been in a blind state mentally and I can't even believe that I've let myself get there. I'm glad that I have recognized this so that I can get myself back on track to doing the right things. Though, I may be in prison and I understand that I'll constantly be around people who will annoy or agitate me, I just need to humble myself and my focus on God and use this place as His boot-camp to build me up. Too much, have I been caught up in the affairs of this place and it's what has caused my downfall.

Well, I'll go ahead and wrap this up by simply asking you all whom might be reading this entry, if you have any thoughts or suggestions or even some words of encouragement please feel free to leave them for my benefit. I look forward to any and all encouraging comments and thoughts that could possibly be found and left.

My most heartfelt wishes, hopes, and prayers go out to all of you out there and may God richly bless all in the same.

Your Friend from Behind Bars,
Lorenzo Gomez
