

Prometheus Writes!

by Nate A. Lindell

Intro.

Welcome philosophers, (a)theists, humanists, other metaphysicists, psychologists, sociologists, and other scients, playwrights, painters, musicians, POETS, and other artists, all critics, any other brand of mental pyromaniacs, bored housewives, caffeine-jacked computer junkies, and any naughty criminals who found a way to hack into the internet!

Welcome all seekers of knowledge!

Welcome too to my friends, fans, associates, and stalkers.

Knowledge must be refined by the fire of others' criticism to purify it. This is a core purpose of this blog, finding, refining, and reporting on knowledge about existence, with the goal of improving it for you and myself. Also, this blog will inform the public, the media, et mon amies about my personal struggles to be a human within the Wisconsin P.O.C. This blog will also be used to communicate with publishers I'm trying to work with, to display some of my art and rally supporters. In short, this is my attempt to rule the world, while having a lotta fun!

Mon généreux l'appréciation to the humans at MIT (yes, I'm excluding the aliens, whom I'll discuss later) who've made the mistake of providing me this literary parole, a chance to semi-rejoin society and let society see me for the human I'm trying to be.

As the title of this blog reveals, the persona I'll be employing to write this blog is Prometheus, how I see him: a mere mortal who opposed the Gods by bringing fire/enlightenment to humanity. Some of the truths I plan on discussing in here will put me at odds with the Gods, the powers that be, hence this particular persona. As a writer, I am very conscious of the various masks/personas people have, which will be discussed too.

Keep in mind the imperfect nature of my means of attempting to achieve inter-subjectivity, written language. Things may distract me as I write and you as you read, while our different experiences create different connotations for the words and word groups I use. If you interpret my writing as pained yet hopeful, witty, optimistic, and critical of those oppressing humanity, you're getting my drift.