

Greetings

I would like to touch bases on a subject that really bothers me and concerns me, and that I have a little cousin dealing with the same thing and I would like to set the record

This topic deals with bigger and thicker women, and the low self-esteem they suffer due to this issue.

Society puts out there through magazines, TV and other advertisements, that a woman has to be a size 5 or 6, or what not to be beautiful, that's complete nonsense.

As a real man, that appreciates true beauty in a woman, I would like to say something to these women.

Women are the queens of this earth and size does not take that away, and in its self is beautiful and should not be treated any less.

True beauty in my eyes is a woman that has real character a good personality, a good heart and soul and a pretty smile that would light up a man's heart, and to top it all confidence and swagger.

Everybody is so caught up in looks that they lose sight of true beauty and true love, wonder why in these times, the divorce rate is so high.

There is no reason why you women should have low self esteem because you are beautiful, and i am here to tell you this.

Me myself loves a bigger and thicker woman, but i am not tryin to find love, just by a womans looks.

The word soulmate in its self is deeper then looks and a womans size, and thats what i am tryin to find and i know she is out there.

I am sure there are men out there like me that appreciates a womans true beauty like myself. So i say to you ladies of size that you are beautiful, so flush that low self esteem in the toilet, and put on your make up, put on something nice have more confidence and go out in the town and have a good time and enjoy your self, mr. right is out there some where lookin for you beautiful 😊 sincerely - Lonnie Bowen -