

A Fresh Start

I am composing my first blog in months. I need to learn how to make these entries in less time. I tend to agonize over each sentence. This insecurity causes me to rewrite too much. Time becomes my enemy.

I keep busy. Blogging adds another commitment to my schedule. It can be a burden. I will try to be less critical and to relax more as I write. Hopefully expressing myself will become easier with practice.

I will be taking a new direction with my writing. I am unable to visualize how it will all fit together. I want to share more about my spiritual life. My existence is centered in learning to love, serve, and obey my master better. He is the God of the Bible. Elohim is worthy of my devotion.

I will share more about YHWH and His Son's lordship over my life. It is the only way for me to remain honest while blogging. The connection I feel with My Creator grows stronger every day. This relationship needs to be reflected in my writing.

I realize that a couple of the words used in this letter may be unfamiliar to you. I hope that my message is still understandable. Clarity will come from my future blogs.

Patrick Rathsack T-45624
M.C.S.P. C-14-221up
P.O. Box 409060
Ione, CA 95640