Hello everyone out there in blog world.

This is Silah Lorbridge in behalf of writer's bloc. I am very pleased to have yet another opportunity to address you.

Today I would like to talk about "Opinion(s)"

It is my belief that everyone has at least one about someone or something. I think it is healthy to maintain certain views about various events, occasions, lifestyle choices etc. as long as it serves to prevent destructive behavior and /or promote positive growth and development.

When the expression of an opinion precipitates or contributes to controversy, or is of such an inflammatory nature as to be detrimental, I would venture to say that it would probably be better "unsaid".

Words are only as effective as they are received and interpreted / understood by the person(s) communicated to. And just because a signal has been transmitted, does not necessarily mean the message was received.

All in all, I think we have a right to hold an opinion - whatever it is - but not to necessarily voice it - in all instances.

But remember: This is only my opinion.

Until next time, this is Silah: Lorthridge saying, "Good Day... and Good Night."
