

Reckieve Your Life ↓

9-21-11

I Keep trying to get the details of my life right. I believe I have control of most of it and there are just a few things left I need to master. Maybe it's a nagging health problem, not enough money, something about my appearance, or someone's annoying habit. But even if I make progress with those, other things fall apart. Yet I stubbornly refuse to acknowledge the overall pattern. My distress is not coming from the current areas of my life that are not to my liking, but from my preoccupation with those areas. I believe that my life is perfectible, but no one ever gets it all under control.
