

Spiritual Beings having a human experience? All things are permitted? Really? Really! When the Eternal Elohim Willed everything into Being — They said: BE! The Grand Architect Of The Universe had an Orderly Arrangement in Mind though, ... in which there is a degree of Security, but... Outside the Arrangement there are corresponding consequences. I watch a lot of PBS, where the program FRONTLINE (FRONTLINE @ PBS: ^{100M}org? — 1-800-PLAY-PBS) has two episodes which may give you some purviews of certain choices the youngsters of our era are making now. Check out "THE WOUNDED PLATOON", for instance. Also PBS aired a Special about the "Meth Epidemic", which is worth while to watch too, (as if the consequences of that life style isn't evident enough). Lets see the corresponding consequences within these 'Arrangements' ... is it *psychosis? It makes one wonder if TGAOTU had designed a plan for psychopaths to proliferate in this day and age in order to thin out our species and/or fill its prisons. (look up the etymological deffinition of *Demagogic and *Malthusian for some insight of this "Arrangement").

Yes, there are those who do not exhibit any psychosis from the above choices as well, so do not think that anyone is cursed to suffer the worst consequences from the above examples. There are a great many artist who have expanded their consciousness with their use of drugs — and most Law Enforcement Agents have served as soldiers in combat. Obviously there are the exceptional few who somehow escape the consequential psychosis, and rather profit from the experience of Living a severly engaged life style — in either case.

What really influences this phenomena, I wonder? Genetics plays a part, I bet. Germans for instance, sired clear back from the tribe of Dan, have been ferocious warriors, so war is nothing new to us. And as for the Meth... German Scientists invented it in WWII. Could this be why these seem so Natural to us? and why we seem to gravitate to them like moths to a flame?! Look guys, not many moths survive the flame, so be most mindful of what you're doing with this life of yours.

Well, aside from Genetics (which our society tends to re-form), the consequential phenomena are partly influenced by our perception of events occurring in our lives. For example; if we see ourselves as victims of circumstances (beyond our control), then the "experience"/"event" can cause much more mental disease, than say...; if we see the circumstance(s) as a wonderful experience presenting lessons to learn from and master - as is our nature to do as we mature to perform Ordo ab Chao.

It is how well you process your experiences in life, which makes all the difference, you see?

So consider carefully lads, your life is what you make of it. Ultimately it is determined by your own purposeful ambitions and/or expectations. Are you an artist who seeks to expand your consciousness? Are you gazing into some abyss looking to solve the riddles of life? Is your drug ab-use recreational? Do you hate life and choose to live on the fringe? If such is the case, then you must consider the chemicals as a means of achieving this or that specific purpose, and then exercise your Will in self-control, to determine when to stop the chemical enhancement and enjoy whatever it is you accomplished - wiser from the experience. Some experiences can be overwhelming though, so it is prudent to consider this and prepare for it before hand. For instance; 12-step programs are useful to assist your 'self control' and recover from inherent tendencies of addiction, while helping you to process and come to terms with the lessons there in.

Or perhaps your options in a land of blind sheeple are few, you feel - and the best you can do is enlist to get paid for doing what you think will come Naturally - overseas.

Look bud, we all have the PTSD disease due to my Crusading daze in the 90's — but you wont be able to cash in on SSI until after a "Medical discharge" caused by the explosive madness overseas — or better yet in your training, (remember, bootcamp is not "training" per se, but rather a weeding-out process — with no benefits from discharge at this point. Did you know that if you answer their query regarding why you joined the armed forces with any other answer than "for my country", you may be rejected?
Or if you test positive for any drugs you will probably be rejected. Even if you're too gung-ho ... you may be rejected right there from bootcamp.). The thing I'm trying to convey is that you need always consider every option son. Consider ~~consequences~~ ^{every option} and exercise * foresight.

Hell! go to the V.A. Hospital and volunteer to help the Vets
- then ask them what you can expect in combat. Ask em what their Medical discharge and benefits are all about. You know the Montana Madness; the exploding tree; the bloody attorney;
fostercare, etc., all may apply to diagnose PTSD and honorably discharge a grunt — at anytime, but preferably after suiting-up. A PTSD Medical discharge may effect your employability in law enforcement agencies though ... but beyond that, it sure beats every other odds soldiers face; of death or dismember'd or dis-honorable discharge resulting from criminal outburst of PTSD. Just be mindful that Career soldiers and career criminals are both oxymoronic terms when you consider just how long a "career" either enjoy, ya know?
On the other hand ... if a Grunt you really want to be, "for God and Country", then study all you can about a Grunt's realities: vide: Gorilla Warfare / Martial stratagems / Combat / Weapons / Vehicles / Munitions / Historical Campaigns / tactics /
Maneuvers / etc., if you will ~~be~~ all you can be, you see?
Study the orderly arrangement of whatever reality you happen to be involved with, and you'll prosper more than the unprepared will. You can see that, cant you?

48 Laws of Power, by - Green ... if I were to suggest any book I've read - it would be this one Will. Weild the power well, son ... you deffinatly have it! Study this book and you can give it perspective as to how best to display it. Honor your loyalties and they will honor you - but always be mindful of the First Law in our cosmos: Self-Preservation. Will-helm = Willful + Protection. Use your head! The Helmet protects your head for a reason. Use your head in everything you Will, Will-I Am. got it? Good!

Good night guys. September 21st just became the 22nd. so I'm going to lay this pen down and go live in my dreams.

I'm wondering if you guys can scan/send your digital photo's on the "comments" section of this blog-site of mine. Will someone give it a try? Destiny, are you good with this kind of stuff, baby girl? Please write and let me know how everything is going in your life sweetheart.

Okay, I love you all and wish you all the best.

Be Blessed.

Ps, what is on; toolshed.com?

Hey, I'm so grateful that there were responsible adults who took you all under their wing (and roof!). That was certainly the only consolation I had during that damned decade of silence.
