

God Gave Us Our Mind

10-6-11

We are free to misuse the gifts

2:40 p.m.

God gave us, or at least to imagine that we have that power. We can dream of a world where there is no real evidence of the divine, where all things live off the death of something else, and where everything, even the stars and their constellations, eventually end. But the smile of God, which knows no time, hasn't vanished simply because we fantasize it has. We are free to misuse our mind, but we can also use it kindly, peacefully, and generously, which allows us to experience its divine origin and partake of its true power.
