

Judging Another Is An Act Of Arrogance

12-14-11

I merely delude myself if I think it is possible to judge. How could I know a faster or better way to transform another person's heart than the way God has already chosen? Judging is a not so subtle way of procrastinating, of putting off something I need to take responsibility for this instant. What am I avoiding that I am taking time to judge? A judgemental state of mind expressed verbally is a unconscious way of taking the focus off of self. Get the plank out of your eye before you zero in on the plank in another's eye.
