

"LIVING ON EARTH"

Page 1 of 3

Earth, here is the place in which I was born. I had Mother, and a Father (whom was very loving to me, and whom understood me inside and out). However, on the other hand, my Mother once told me that I would not live to see my eighteenth birthday due to all of the bad behavior I was displaying as a child coming up.

Both of my folks are dead now and no longer here living on Earth. But here I am, thirty-four years old now, (a sweet sixteen years later and still counting from my eighteenth birthday). So, I guess there is a God somewhere. But where was God when my Grandmother, (my heart), was taken away from me? Certainly God wasn't here on Earth with me, because if he was, he would have heard my pleas and my cry to bring my Grandma back to Earth. Now I'm all alone living on Earth.

I'm currently incarcerated because I broke a man made law in society. All my life I have always been a "unique" "person". I can't be touched. "Real Talk".

Yes, I do indeed live an alternative life-style right here on this planet Earth, and I am very comfortable with who I am (even though others may not, but still I would never try to impose my lifestyle upon anyone).

I'm locked up today for the poor choices I've made in the past. I'm glad I don't have any children out there, because I couldn't deal with the reality of another person raising children that belong to me, here on planet Earth.

Now do I regret my past actions?
No! My reason for being is that I was in my right frame of mind at the time I did what I did. But if I could do it all again, without question, I would change the way I did things, and I know beyond all doubt that I would be free today.

I recognize, that while living here on Earth, the first step in becoming an adult, is for one to recognize "our" faults, Rights and wrongs, and our ups and downs, and refrain from blaming others for our mistakes. Responsibility will eventually come into everyone's life here on Earth, and there is no escaping it, (only avoiding it), so why not just face it and deal with it?

Here on Earth, I've frequently heard a common cliche used in which says: "Men are from Mars, and Women are from Venus." Well, I'm from Earth, always have been here, and I've never been to Mars or Venus, so such a cliche doesn't resonate with me (nor any of my siblings whom happen to also be fellow Earthlings).

Now granted that my "uniqueness" has somewhat isolated me from my siblings, and even though my perspective on things in life may differ vastly from my blood kin, there are just some realities in life that even the most contrasted of individuals cannot help but to agree on. Survival is one of these realities, (and it's been a reality for me ever since I was fourteen and started getting into trouble).

I'm not particularly proud of this fact, but it's the truth (and it's a truth my siblings, whom are from Earth, and live on Earth and Not on Mars and Venus, know and recognize as reality).

But even if they were to slow and grasping this reality was complex, I couldn't wait for them to catch up to my speed here on Earth because I have to survive until I regain my liberty.

page 3 of 3

When I was in society before I got locked up, I had a home, cars, jobs, money, etc.... all here on the planet Earth, (So I know what it's like to have all this material stuff here on Earth).

I was self-dependent out there, but now in here, I don't have any of those things. All I now have is a good state of mind and a true peace within my heart.

I've lost so much, and I've lost so many people that I love since I've been locked up here on Earth, that sometimes I do feel very alone. But guess what? I'm gonna be okay living here on Earth, because I've got God's mercy (even when I know I don't deserve it at times).

I thank God for his grace, and I must say God has truly blessed me mentally, physically, and spiritually, (and these blessings while I'm here on Earth I shall never lose, and while everything else may pass, these blessings will remain).

Living on Earth is a real challenge for "me", and anyone who lives right here on Earth, will more than likely agree, that living on Earth is a challenge for all whom reside here.

Words by De'anna Tha Doll
(All questions and commentary is welcomed and encouraged so do not be shy!).