Wow! Is it that time again?..It seems as if the 2008 elections were a few days ago. Now here it is 2012-full circle once again, and this election may be even more significant than that of 2008. The magnitude of the issues and policies at play in this election cycle is of grave importance to all americans. Whether you as voter give, President Obama, the much needed extra 4 years to see his policies take shape and continue to help the american people out of such a dismal, emotional, and nefarious situation.

As I watch the republican debates, or listen to their stomp speeches, or here the pundits way in on all this, it is truly amazing to me that any republican candidate could even have a chance in 2012. And I am not just speaking on the presidential race, but city, state or on a larger scale. Listen to what they (The republicans) are saying, what they wish to do nad where they want to take the country.

Republicans will skip the prosperous years of President Clinton, and draw the country right back into chaos of 2000-2008. Where the rich got richer and the middle class of this country evaporated almost out of existance. Do I agree with all of President Obama's policies? Absolutely NOT! I believe that there are numerous things that could have been done differently, but then "WE" all are on the outside looking in.... However, I do believe that this President has a love, compassion and understanding for this country and to this country that has been missing from the Executive Branch for too long.

Everything that President Obama, has done these past 3+ years, has been for teh benefit of all americans, especially those hardest hit by the recession. Whether you agree with his policies or not, you have to at least give him credit for that.

President Obama, has been steadfast in his pursuit of equality for all americans. To maintain the middle class. To make sure that everyone that wants to work, willing to work and able to work can. I don't believe that most americans are looking for handouts, nor do I believe that all americans aspire to be rich. I do however, believe that all americans aspire to the pursuit of happiness. Americans aspire to be wealthy...Wealthy in health, in spirit, in love-In knowing that their children will not go hungry, that their family has a roof over the heads, clothes on their backs. If their children aspire to get a higher education they will be able to afford it. If their child is sick, they won't go bankrupt with medical bills.

Morgage firms are rolling the dice with american families homes, big banks won't lend money out, insurance companies want the Affordable Care Act over turned, and Wallstreet wants to go back to the same ole practices that almost destroyed the american economy before President Obama, was elected. The same ole same ole, that got us in this mess, and these republicans aspire to return this country to that. DOES MITT ROMNEY, HAVE A REAL/SUCCESSFUL CHANCE AT THE WHITEHOUSE!? WHY!? HOW!? LISTEN TO HIS RHETORIC! HOW HE SPEAKS ABOUT THE POOR-THE MIDDLE CLASS-THOSE LESS FURTUNATE THAN HIMSELF. Really america! WAKE UP!

Wisconsin is going thru the pain of those that boycotted the midterm elections here. Thinking that they were hurting the democrats by not voting holding a referendum against President Obama, because they can't feel the effects of economic growth yet. So they turned their backs on the midterm elections. Now when Scott Walker, gets in a does all this draconian type policies, they want to cry foul. How can you now, when you didn't exercise you GOD giving rights to vote. Scott Walker, never lied to anyone in this state. You knew this man was a idiot, that he practices partisan politics and believe in right-wing agendas.

Now there is a recall in effect here in the state of Wisconsin, and there shouldn't be. Not because I agree with anything that Scott Walker, but he was duly elected. Either you didn't vote, or you voted for him, thinking a vote for him is a vote against the democrats. Whatever the case, you weap what you sow. I am not trying to be mean, or seem uncaring, on the contrary, I want you to understand that every vote counts. Either you vote, or you get stuck with undesirables, like Scott Walker or Mitt Romney.

There is a clear choice in 2012! You can give the republicans control of the Senate and the Whitehouse, yes, that is a choice. You can allow this country to return to Big banks, insurance companies doing as they please, the morgage firms hitting you with all these outrageous high interest rates, high morgages, and wallstreet playing russian roulette with your lively hoods. If you don't care that they will sell this country to the highest bidders, then vote republican.

However, if you have real morals, values, a sense of what american and family is really about then there is a choice. If you like knowing that consumers have a watchdog agency out there looking out for them, that insurance companies can no longer deny you for having existant illnesses, that credit card companies can no longer hide hidden fees on you, nor airline companies. If you like that morgage companies are being held accountable, that you child can get a quality education, that all combat troops are out of Iraq. And according to the Secretary of Defense, combat troops in Afganistan, will begin coming home sooner than expected. Then give President Obama, and the democrats the time they need. Vote! Your vote matters, without your vote then the republicans may take control of the Whitehouse as well as the Senate. If that happens, there will be no recall elections. Romney, will have 4 years to destroy everything that has been done these past 3 years.

President Obama, never lied to you, to us, it has taking decades to get this country in this situation, and you expect this President to come in and fit it all in 4 years!? REALLY!? Yet, you gave President Bush 8 years after he stole the first election, oyu put him in a position to steal the second one too.

Give this President the chance that "HE" deserves. I would rather have a President that fights for the american people, than a president that sees a COMPANY AS A PERSON! So there is a clear choice in 2012, and your vote counts. President Obama, is human, people expected him to be the coming of the messiah, and when he didn't live up to this outrageous expectations you lost favor with him. President Obama, is a mere man, with great responsibilites. He is doing his best, but like he said, he needs your help, your trust and loyalty. Believe in him like he believes in you all.

So I hope that this November, you rally all your friends, family, coworkers and associates and get out and rock the vote. These are serious times that this country and world is facing, and it will take a President that has love and compassion for his people. Maybe somewhere in the future that may be Mitt Romney, just not now.

Excuse my many mistakes. I type fast and I am so focused on what I am saying that I don't catch my mistakes until it's too late. But I hope my meaning is clear enough.
