Dear Sandea,

Behind The Bars just forwarded to me your comments that were left on my blog in regards to the thoughts I wrote pertaining to Mr. John Francis.

Just listening to Mr. Francis on the radio was intriguing, but I wish I could've actually watched Mr. Francis's interview on T.V. as you did (because there's something more magnetic and connective about the visual and audio aspect of a story being imparted, as opposed to just the audio being consumed by the mind).

In any event Sandea, I concur with you, Mr. Francis's journey of silence was very inspiring, and yes, such inspiration could be very useful for people and their souls, (especially in the introspective sense).

Well Sandra, I just wanted to let you know that I thank you for taking the time to consider some of my thoughts shared on the blog, and that hopefully, you'll take some more time to check out and comment further on some of the other thoughts I've shared on various topics that have been posted on my blog, (*Check out my thoughts for February 2012, and let me know what you think).

It's truly a special thing (in an empowerment kind of way), to know that my thoughts (as well as the thoughts of others whom unfortunately are currently incarcerated also), are able to extend the thoughts from Behind The Bars! Thanks for being interested enough to check the blogs out, because remember, it takes "two-to-tango" and the blog doesn't work out so good without your participation and attention from "out there" with US "in here".

Communication is not only a two-way street, it's also the key and cornerstone for people, (all peoples), to build a better way, for a better day and a better future. Stay Progressive..
