

Art As Seditious by Jeremy Pinson

I was recently told I can't have art supplies because my art is seditious. I was also called a Gadfly. I knew the definition of neither term so I consulted my dictionary and was quite amused. I can't imagine how art could possibly sabotage the world's largest Government particularly since my art isn't even remotely political. It is a positive use of my time which I enjoy which likely has more to do with its prohibition than any real suspicions of sedition. Unfortunately for my prison overlords even a pen and paper can be turned to art. As can the Koolaid on my meal tray and the canvass that is my cell wall. The Government can stop possession art supplies but never the desire to create beauty.
