

Race ... Through Your Eyes

I'm curious as to what the world looks like from the eyes of men and women of various cultures, ethnicities, and living environments.

The world from a white man living in a trailer court may be different in the eyes of one in Manhattan. Or the world may be different from the eyes of an Indian woman in America opposed to one in India. I want to hear about these different perspectives and have a dialog about via my blog and by mail.

African American, Caucasian, Native, Indian, Arab, Asian, Latin, and all other men and women of various races, cultures, ethnicities, and religions please share with me how the world is through your eyes.

What are your:

- experiences, circumstances, living conditions, opportunities, educational environment, work options, relationship status, etc

I believe having an idea of others experiences opens ones mind to how diverse the world is and the realities we all face. Please share them with me, good or bad, and I thank you for your stories.

Share my Blog with others:

<http://between-the-bars.org/blogs/2042>

Write me Directly At:

Tarrus T. Rogers #377571
WSPF / P.O. Box 9900
Roscobel, WI 53805