The lamestream media would have you believe Rush Limbaugh got into trouble because he called that girl a prostitute.

That wasn't the reason; first, he didn't call her a "slut"; he asked if she was a slut.

The real reason Rush got in trouble was for using a hypothetical to illustrate a point. Shortly before his "slut" remark, Rush said that even if Mother Theresa herself ran against Obama, she would be called a "slut", etc.. That's why he got in trouble; unauthorized use of a(n) analogy/hypothetical.

Who Says You Can't Shake It Up?

What's "It"?

You mean, "shake things up"?
