

We do have some music commonalities. But metal isn't for everyone. Either you feel it or you don't. Because of metal and hard rock I've gone backward to discover some surprising likes. Screaming Jay Hawkins, Crazy world of Arthur Brown, Tommy Emmanuel, Genesis (Phil Collins era), Rush (duh!) Queen (obviously), Paganini, Wagner. But seeing you list Yes and Kansas I was thinking a couple bands I love that you might seriously like. Dream Theatre and Shaddow Gallery. Mark II Deep Purple and Dio era Rainbow, genius organ/guitar albums. And because of my liking for Johnny Cash and Highwaymen, I can't acknowledge this other stuff out there as country. I agree that Seether and their ilk leave a bad feeling, mainly because to me they're derivative of what little I liked of the 90's. Maybe try Nickelback. But ~~there's~~ there's always christian metal if you want it. Don't really sound right though. It's an angry rebellious music. Oh, try Tony MacAlpine. Amazing guitarist, plays and 8 string. Anyway.

Rock On!
