

Taking Photos...Smile or Not?

There has been a debate here in the prison about whether it's better to smile or not when taking a photo?

Debate one Says: If you smile you appear happy and no one should look happy taking a picture in prison.

Debate two Says: It's perfectly normal to smile taking a photo and people, friends, and loved ones want to see you appear happy rather than mad, frowning, or mugging the camera despite circumstances.

I figure what better platform to get comments on than a blog, so I'm reaching out to all of you to chime in on the debate and let me know your thoughts. Do you prefer smiling pictures over non-smiling ones. And or...would you find it strange or awkward to see a picture of someone smiling in prison? I look forward to reading your views and I'll let the fellas know as well.

Also, for fun, send me your best smiling or non-smiling photos. I'll try to duplicate them and post them on the blog...Please don't have me ^{be} some crazy pictures (Ha-Ha) It's all good though. Thanks in advance and I do appreciate your support.
