

Yeah mom I bet like alot of things in my life you didnt like my point of view because it paints a picture of you contrary to your own view of yourself. Your financial instability has been due to your own bad financial choices so suck it up and dont blame your family.

When I go home my mother will know I love her just as she has always known that, but I will be too old for that love to be used as a tool to manipulate me. And you speak of "peace", well rest assured I am an independant thinker and am well capable of getting a job and my own apartment or home so you just rest your pretty head about having "peace". You have demonstrated for 9 years you have no desire to be in my life, believe me I can wait 20 years to be the one to repay the favor.

And cut the crap about being so happy to "find" this website. For years you had every opportunity to send a letter, fill out visiting forms to visit, or since 2008 just send me an email. You chose not to. You ignored holidays. You even ignored my birthday. No, your miraculous desire to communicate is because you wanted to defend yourself from my harsh and very public criticism of you. Nobody prevented me from writing you. I never missed a birthday. I never missed a Mothers Day.

Not even in the midst of riots, murders, even when the building was on fire.

You talk about "love" and "missing" your son but what did you do when your son was beaten and stabbed nearly to death by white supremacists? What did you do when your son overdosed on pills in Florida and spent 6 days in ICU with a breathing tube? What did you do when your son was beaten unconscious and raped by other inmates? You did nothing. Not even a reply to acknowledge my pain. Not a letter to authorities demanding help for your son.

You are not only a sorry excuse for a parent but as a human being. You are destitute because you frivolously spend your money. You have diabetes because you eat junk food recklessly and have not exercised once in my 20 years of life. Your family abandoned you because you have always cared only for yourself. You "cry" when other people hurt you yet I have seen you do nothing but shun and hurt those who care about you your whole life. The very cruelest thing I could do to you is to leave you alone like you did your own mother and father. She died alone in a hotel room and He died alone in a hospital. Will you die alone? As much as I despise you for all you have done while trying to feign innocence, you won't die alone because at the end of the day I love you against all the reasons not to and most of all because I don't want to be like you. You can come onto my blog and try to manipulate my readers but have a spine and be more direct and honest about it because you can believe I will reply from the heart with brutal honesty. I am 26 years old and have defeated some of the government's best lawyers in Court before so you would do well not to presume I am naive, gullible or stupid. I am not 15 years old anymore which you might have known had you bothered to stay in touch. I don't "misinterpret" your words, I just either don't agree or find you to be often disingenuous about things.

If you want to be in my life pick up a pen and speak to me and stick with it. All your other lies, excuses and nonsense I can only say cut the crap mom. Prison taught me some things very important 1) you only live once and 2) you make your own destiny. So if you were so motivated and caring you would do more to be in my life. You speak well but your actions betray you and they always will.