

My Secret Blog Commenter

Jeremy Pinson

Some of you who read my blog may have noticed my most frequent commenter (progdp). This is my mother. She attempted to comment in a way that would not reveal her as my mother because as a younger man I was always embarrassed of my mother and so she learned it was best to simply observe me from a distance or risk me pulling a vanishing act.

Well I am no longer a child filled with teenage angst and though I can at times be brutally critical of my family I love my mother very much and am honored to have her presence grace my blog. She need not worry about my privacy because I am after all a blogger writing intimate thoughts on the most public forum on earth, the internet.

So Mom if you have something to say you don't need to be camouflaged when saying it. I love you, I miss you, I'm glad you like my blog and never again will you embarrass me even if you are kind of corny sometimes. And since this is your month, Happy Mother's Day.