Dear Gemmalucey,

July 1, 2012

First off, I would like to say Thank You for taking your time to read my blog. I really appreciate it. And I am very thankful. I was very astonished to have received a reply. It means a lot to have someone willing to read my thoughts. Not only are these my thoughts, this is my heart that I put on my paper. Everything I put down is true for all to see. I am especially glad that you found my letter to my mother so moving that it touched your heart at least a little...

My life has been full of mostly failure and disappointment, with a little of minor accomplishment sprinkled in. I'm 27 years old and I feel as if I have been nothing to speak on as a son, a Grandson, a Brother and a Father. But my feeling of failure when it comes to my mother hurts me now that I am able to see the strain I have put on her. I have not been the prototypical son that a mother wishes for when they wish for a baby. I let her down in so many ways. At times, I feel worthless, for her to still profess her love for me is the epitome of a Mother's love.

Sometimes I feel as if I don't have the right to write My Mother. From where I sit, as a Man, I can't possibly be proud of myself for the lack of time I spent with my mother.

The Reason I feel the way I feel is because I got myself incarcerated and left her out there without any help.

Sometimes I feel like I should be dead or have been aborted at birth to make room for someone more productive

And who was able to give what a great mother deserves:

An even greater Son. It was said that the only way to pay your parent back for the time, love and dedication, is to never disrespect them, or let them down.

While I have been incarcerated I have had a lot to think about dealing with my life. There are a lot of times I wish I could start over.

I wish you will/can be so nice to write me one on one. I would really appreciate your letters and thoughts. I feel like I am all alone with a select few people who write every now and then.

A friend is something or someone I don't have. I'll give you my information and if your heart allows it, you can write me and begin a correspondence on a friendship basis. Just someone to talk to that is an adult and will allow me to see the beauty that is inside of someone else.

If you will allow me to be your friend, you don't have to write me through the blog. You can contact me at this address in the near future: QUASTON HUSKEY #0872341

Again,

P.S. Thank you for taking your time to respond to my blog.

I hope to hear from you in the near future...

Sincerely Yours,
Quaston
