

My Journey

Throughout my life I've made "alot" of poor desicions. I ran away from home experiencing homelessness, got involved with gangs, violence, crime, drugs, and alcohol. My poor desicion making ultimtely led to my current incarceration.

In 2002 I was found guilty of burgalary, Possession of a firearm as a felon, and two counts of theft of firearms. I was senteced to 13½ years in prison and five years of probation.

I have been in prison over ten years now and progressively I'm making slides in improving the quality of man I need to be in this world. I've engaged in college programming completing all of my courses with straight A's and I completed self help, vocational, and training programs with honors.

I intend on taking all the knowledge and tools I've learned in prison to the free world and applying it to my every-life out there. For the first time in my life I'm excited about doing the right thing. I know my journey wont be easy but I've learned its how we respond to the hardships in our lives that define the quality of men and woman we are in this world. This time I wont settle for anything less than success.
