Been a while since writing. A lot of minor shit has happened. Dish Network ruin the last season of Breaking Bad for us. Layoffs all over the prison, luckily not me. Cats are still better than dogs. Romney is a crap choice. It's been hotter than hell and the Olympics started. Just watched John Carter and still honestly don't see why it failed and G.I. Joe gets a sequel. All this pales in comparison to my daughter and her mom cutting me out of their lives without so much as a fuck off punk. 13 months of silence. What would you do people? When people refuse to write, accept your phone calls and never intend to visit. What conclusion could one possibly come to? Keep trying. That's all I can do. So if either of you (Daughter, her Mom) are reading this, respond through this site. It's all good, really. Until then have a good life....
