Why I would make most religions sorry to have me. For one, I've always been uncomfortable around religious books, movies, other propaganda as well as various people. Since I was four and the first thing I was forced to read Genesis, As the first reading experience goes, it wasn't totally unpleasant. But I did enjoy finding the flaws in the creation story.

Basically, I make a horrible religious person, because I can't blindly follow, or judge people for being something I don't agree with. I don't care about anyone's acceptance of me into their various groups, I believe in evolution and that the Earth is more than 6000 years old, intelligent alien life and leaving people to their own devices.

I don't respect a people's or creed. But the individual and what he/she has to bring to the table. Yes, no one asked about any of this but I've seen and heard a lot lately that made me think of all this. What "it" is, who the fuck knows. Just get through life without pissing on your shoes, or anyone else's.
