

Howdy Nicki! ☺

Wow, thanks for putting a smile on my heart! ☺ Love your postcard with the two roos on it looking at that bloody/orange sunset (readers, see www.lamotte.com.au, photo A20 of the Australian Collection to view this pic'). Right now, I just finished Daniel C. Dennett's Consciousness Explained, which, towards the end, talks a bit about how some animals perceive sunsets etc., so, it had me thinking about more than you might have expected I would. Also, it is obviously a male (larger, more haughty) + a female roo in the pic', both looking at the sunset, about 8 feet from each other.

Cognitive Sciences are fascinating to me, particularly the nature of personality, personality disorders, A.I. ...pretty much all the fields.

Anyhoo, I may disappoint you on the depth of character deal. I'm, in fact, very committed to doing what I believe is right, even if everyone else thinks it's wrong. This can change given the circumstances. But, oh yes, you are correct, I take mateship very seriously (see post #77 for some clarification. How many times have you been left hanging by a lame mate? Me, even more, even more, I assure you,

What can I do but be the best mate I can be? I'd only be adding to the sheistiness if I was sheisty. But, sometimes, especially in here, I must repay evil with evil in ways that might shock you, but I don't want to! It's just that some, for whatever reasons, take kindness for weakness (e.g. Borderline Personality Disorder, common here)

Your kindness + the very few good-hearted people I run across do give me hope that some humans are worthy of me investing my emotions in. Bobby chose to part ways. My most righteous bro here is Sean.

Dig your mind, dig your style, dig your linguistics, dig your taste. Holler whenever you want? Sorry, I can't mail you replies, would need an IRC for that, but I will post replies! ☺

Thanks, Natp

P.S. Are you from the "Outback" or a city girl? I'm from America's Outback - out West, Montana Rocky Mountains! Mateship was esteemed highly there + then.
