Dear Nicki;

Thank you so much for responding! Feedback is always great! And thank for being a reader!!

You make a fine point that was well considered before I wrote "Friends v. Frienemies".

Believe it or not, there are a number who did feel awkward and not sure what to do - that I do not hold anything against.

As far as that is, there is no harm, no foul - I have moved on and they may have as well.

The "beef" of the complaint is that after 8 years of nothing there are true friends & family receiving inquiries of my current status. ~~those~~ from ~~the~~ the ones that either failed to stand up for me (many I loved or cared deeply for) and mixed themselves in with those hellbent to destroy me; and those I believed were on my side and later found that to be wrong. What I maybe should have specified was that these frienemies stood against me or abstained but now are trying to worm their way back in.

On that, I stand offended and disturbed. And while there is no pain, the offense is rancid and gross; and I am not about to fall into that grave again.

I have new friends - REAL friends. I have new goals and a winning outlook. I'm cutting the dead from my tree...
Happy Thoughts! -Anoy
