When I wrote that poem I was sitting in my cell watching some dating show, and they asked the guy what he was looking for, and he couldn't answer, and I thought about what I wanted and what those qualities would entail, and that's what came out. I put mostly all of my thoughts, wants, and emotions into everything that I write, so to see that it's appreciated brings a smile to my face. I also want to thank you for your well wishes.

I hope that I'll find that special someone, but it's hard to do behind these walls, but I figure that if it's meant it'll happen.

Hopefully more people will visit the blogsite, and start trying to find out more. That could open a lot of doors.
