

Hey Doc Bergas: Thanks for your opinion + explanation. I must clarify though that it was the WAIS-III, not IV that I posted the cluster scores for. Recently, that same psychologist (the supervisor here - he wasn't a computer programmer, he recently clarified, but a shipping supervisor/quality-control manager at a software co., not a programmer) gave me the scores for the 4 subparts of the WAIS-IV, which he did on me almost 2 years ago from behind a pane of shatter-resistant glass. Those scores were:

This is exactly what he put in my file.

	scaled score	points earned/points possible
Similarities	16	34/36
Vocabulary	19	57/57
Information	18	25/26
Comprehension	18	35/36

- he provided no I.Q. score for these, but I invite you too.

Frankly, I found them easy ("who's Pocahontas?") + one humorous ("What's the circumference of the Earth at the equator?" - I laughed, guessed 30,000 miles, he said, as I recall clearly, 24,800 and 96 or 69 miles, which I distinctly recall b/c I was pissed about not getting it or partial credit; I assumed I had to get it exact, knew I wouldn't, so my guess was very flippant) + one I felt he shafted me on ("A shallow creek makes a lotta noise" or like that - stupid people talk a lot, said I only earned partial credit). Piss me off + I remember very well.

F.Y.I., I hated grammar + English in school, flunked out in Tech. College, thought it's for fags. After about 8,000 pgs of legal writing in prison (counting rough drafts), I began studying grammar + writing more seriously. About 7,000 pgs of legal writing after that, I got into poetry + took French more seriously. I think the principle expressed in the Talent Code (Daniel Coyle) was proven in me. Further, keep in mind that I lacked the hammer, anvil + stirrup in my right ear from birth, had epilepsy (not since about age 9) + had a speech impediment ("sh" sound like "s" + "g"s still sound lispy), so was a horrific speaker, but did read well. Reciting poetry + attitude help.

Math, I don't use much; my long term memory is great (the psych here did several components of the WMS, but saw no need to finish it - I did very well), surprised that my working memory wasn't higher.

As a youngster, I excelled in classes, when not distracted by problems at home. My mom + littlest bro had M.P.D./D.I.D. + I had to play a major role in keeping them stable + us kids safe; surely had P.T.S.D. myself, mislabelled A.D.D.

Consider also testing conditions - handcuffed, shackled, surrounded by lunatics, + they deem me a lunatic too (36 on the PCL-II). Sleep's... difficult here.

Stick around, tell your fellows I'm down for studies, testing + am looking for a good place to donate my body + brain too. All I ask is some coeds necrophilize me. :D
