Some say prison is the home of the heartless and terrible that every inmate is hopeless and irreparable...
First and foremost, where I am is no indication of who I am. This place will never define me we all made mistakes but the wise learn from them, grow and blossom.

Let me say I was 17 when I came to prison I was taught ~~to~~ by the darkness how to think how to feel how to judge how to believe and unfortunately how to love. I was influenced that right is wrong and wrong was right. Pride affected my outlook on the passions of life, my family & friends in every aspect of my life. ~~And~~ The way I looked at money my pride & love for it made it a part of evil. ~~My~~ My pride to get money by all means res-resents the evil side of money the love and pride for money makes human kind do evil. I know for I was one of those evil men. I was so caught up in given up my true identity to I identify myself with the world

I never stop to fully understand being a male is a matter of birth, being a man is a matter of choice. ~~nor~~ Nor did I stop to think a man encompasses more than just having brute strength. We can not become what we need to be if we remain what we are! I have always had a strong sense of myself but I let the smallest things get in the way cause me to lose my identity. But I have learn to motivate myself by my own morality, by assemble, knowledge, wisdom and understand. It's hard to see yourself the way others see you were not perfect, so people emphasize ~~on~~ ^{on} weaknesses. You have to have plenty of strength, believe me character poise a sense of responsibility. ~~As~~ As man's we have unlimited potential yet were trapped in a cycle of self-destructive behavior unable to evolve beyond existence. I know it's a ultimate irritable leap into the unknown going at the unexpected but it's reality. It's not fraud forced out of desperation we live in a dioritized deranged social structure we have transcended in barriers in our own ways. As people and human begin we can step outside the madness and recognize another and get to know them. I honestly believe a person who is not content with what they have will not be content with what they would like to have. From these moment till the end of time we must start using our intellect and not or blind devotion to make Rational choices.

—Take care

With the patience of only god I anticipate your words.
