

The Madness, Myths & Mayhem

12-25-12

As I dwell inside the bowels of this beast, I try to picture myself explaining the daily life to one who has never seen, experienced, or heard of the souls in the tomb "buried alive".

Written from solitary confinement (picture a one bedroom apartment and your locked inside the bathroom 24/7) Each day is an uphill battle to just stay sane yet at the same time not to succumb to the madness around you.

This place is designed to break you!! Mentally, physically, as well as spiritually. Apts make no mistake about its purpose. Torture of the mind, body & soul. Somehow, some way when you arrive at these gates the "state" has targeted you. No matter of your innocence or guilt the "state" has deemed you a threat to its establishment.

Many are products of a society that has no use for the poor, the broken, the down-trodden ghetto dweller.

To escape the reality of our dire situations we find solace in a drug, drink, television show, or some type of book/magazine of escapism.

It's a sad situation that we find ourselves in, constantly destroying ourselves in the process. Fighting each other over petty shit yet we lick the boots of those who make a living off of our misery! Divided by race, cliques, religion and lifestyles we always find ways to stay separated. Playing right into the oppressors hand with fake politics, false hope & disunity.

Undeclared spies & snakes continue to infiltrate and disrupt any real means of progress, yet the cycles of chaos & madness continues do to the mindset many have chosen to accept as right or real!

None of these people talking about the latest game, TV show, or book look as if this shit is gonna help us achieve anything.

shit we are living now is foul! So its time to be the change that you want instead of just complaining about it yet accepting it. An active mind is dangerous so you got to use your head. Think for yourself, ask questions and put into practice
some real shit.
