Dear Almuccia,

Hey! Thank you for your considerate response to my thought for words on my blog.

We as captives, prisoners, slaves, but more or less, always human beings, cherish alot of these minute objects and/or different properties because the actual FREEDOM to pursue more important persons, places, & things have been taken away from us unwillingly. Therefore, we grasp onto the very next best person, places, and things to remain sane!

The changing of my address affected my life the same way it likely affected a enslaved african, indian, irish, slav, P.O.W. ect., dragged across shores, land, or air to a foreign place around alien people doing strange tactics to them like stripping them of their culture, religion, language, clothes, identy leaving "NO" immoral stone unturned... So in the shortest words possible I am 'no' longer recognizable to those that use to "KNOW" & "LOVE" me!!!

I love reading mainly nonfiction books such as: wars, revolutions science, politics, a little economics and history. I havenn't read and fiction books in awhile. probably because I can't find any riveting ones.

Yes, peace and happiness is the remedy to obliterate war and sadness. What individual doesn't crave for these two conditions? In fact, your average person causes pain to others because they'er in a state of neglect of one or both of the two! So the scriptures says: "we must beat our swords into plow shears".

More next time..

Solidarity/unity
