

Uhuruisms

1) The saddest day in a Field Marshal's military career would be perhaps the day he gazes out on the war theater and notices that one of his closest commanders has abandoned him. He is non-communicative.

Uhuru on the art of seeing and being, in perpetual war. A uhuruism.

Art of Vita

4/17/2011 to Khofj.

2) We must always be mindful of the complaints we make in life. For, because God is the Arbitrator of all things, we might mistake a blessing for a punishment. A lesson of learning as a scorning. Miss an opportunity for a long progress, for a cheap and short route that will end up right where we begin. Let us be mindful of our complaints and the people we complain about. For they are often interlocked with each other.

Uhuruism

4/25/2011

Go to: betweenthebars.org/154uhuru'spen