A Rip off!

By Darren Eason © 2003

I traded in a good job, to being unemployed,
I traded in my fame, to my reputation being destroyed.
I traded in my 97 sunfire, that was full of beat, traded in my nice hair cuts, and nice shoes on my feet.
I traded in my hobbies, to laying in a small cell,
I traded in bowling winning money, to going straight to jail.
I traded in time with my family, and being with my son, traded in being a family man, to being a arsonist on the run.
I traded in my goals of fire fighting, to striking a match, traded in a fluffy mattress to this so called mat.
I traded in all my good things, and traded them for bad, traded in all my jewelry, to things that make me mad.
To me it's a rip off, because I traded all my dreams in,
I went from being known to having enemies, and not friends.
I traded in all the girls, I had sex with on the street,
traded that pleasure to inmates in the vaguum who sweep.
I traded in my freedom, to a do not pass go sign,
I traded in my dignity to tell the truth instead of lying.
I traded in my home, to being in a medium security prison,
I traded in wisdom for foolishness because I didn't listen.
I traded in buying expensive things, no matter the cost, traded money in my pockets, to money on my books now that's
