

Reply ID = d4pt

Mom,

I am glad to see that you are having some fun in your life and beginning to come out of the shell you have lived in for so long. I have believed most of my adult life that you would benefit from therapy sessions over a long period of time. Truly you have suffered trauma and tragedy no human should endure but you have compounded your problems by withdrawing from the world and blaming everything wrong in your life on me, your parents, etc. Life is not fair nor is it easy for anyone. Its made even worse when you condemn all of humanity for the wrongdoing of a few. Pain is inevitable but when you reject any opportunity to make friends or repair damaged relationships on the basis that the whole world is foul you lose the inevitable moments of joy too. My suggestion: Let go of the past.

- Jeremy Pinson
12/27/12