

Jose Antonio Hernandez blog

1-15-13

①

I haven't posted a blog for awhile but I would like to comment on a issue I feel is important. Gun reform. This isn't my first time in prison, I've been sentenced to prison 3 times, all for gun felonys. It seems like every time I get out of prison I want to get a gun cuz its the only way I feel protected. I can not purchase a gun legally, but that does not stop me one bit. Most people I know commit burglary's to obtain guns, from law abiding citizens, who still have the right to bear arms. This cycle will never stop and it is happening right now as I write this blog. I also believe that as technology and games become more advanced, our common sense and moral values become less. Mental illness is at a all time high because as technology becomes more of are everyday life, society as a whole find it harder to disconnect.

If the killing of innocent children in Newtown does not fill the person who hears it with disgust and the want to reform gun laws, then I believe that person does not deserve to own a gun. It should touch every American at the deepest level there is, the need to protect there children.

(2)

at any cost.

Why would a person need a gun with a 30 round clip? Is there a herd of deer 30 deep that all need to be shot at once? I know looking at it from this side of the fence, 30 rounds always meant to me less times I had to reload and there are no deer in my neighborhood.

I lost my little brother to gun violence, he was shot and died at 19yrs old. He was a good kid, but a bullet does not discriminate. It does not care about race, age, gender, political agenda's, its only desire is to take a life. My prayers go out to every family who lost someone to gun violence and to the family right now who will get the phone call that will change their life forever.

Jose A Hernandez