

January 16th, 2013

Greetings!
Hi

Welcome to another posting of Uncarcerated Poetry: Intriguing Words of Conviction...

I am sure you have taken notice to the fact that I have not posted anything for quite some time. I regret such fact, however, honestly speaking, I did not receive the acknowledgement or feedback that I was anticipating. So unfortunately I did not feel the desire or need to continue to post for just the benefit of posting.

As previously expressed, I am a poet that loves to write. However, writing takes a lot of time and energy, which I see no reason to invest such if there is no interest to read such.

Please understand that it was my anticipation to establish dialogue and hopefully reestablish contact with society, through the existence of my poetry. Unfortunately I've received the impression that there's no real interest in the reading of Uncarcerated Poetry: Intriguing Words of Conviction or establishing any dialogue or contact. Therefore, I have decided to discontinue the posting of this blog indefinitely until ^{such} perhaps shown.

I thank all those whom may have shown an interest and I request of you to please share it with others, and perhaps establish an open bridge of dialogue so that the posting of Incarcerated Poetry: Intriguing Words of Conviction may continue.

For those that may have the time and perhaps desire, I would love to hear from you via snail mail.

In the meantime, take care of oneself and many blessings to you and yours throughout the new year.

I
I remain,
The Peoples' Poet