Thanks for your comments and concern for Tiny's soul.

Yeah, I think most people immediately make the racism/hatred translation in their minds. Like I don't consider myself racist- I never dreamed of harming minority women/kids or other innocents. Yet for several beliefs that I have, I'm labeled a racist by black/Mex prisoners, government officials and Zionist/communist front groups and unofficial spokespeople. So often that I no longer even care about the label anymore.

I think it's just the new way the prevailing powers demonize and discourage certain trains of thought. If you deviate from the politically correct party line- your a 'racist', 'sexist', 'homophobe', 'terrorist', etc...which translates subconsciously in most people's minds to subhuman and deserving of death and torment... Just a control tool; "racists" don't deserve constitutional rights, peace, justice...Sorta keeps those who wish to retain such basic human rights in conformity to what they're told to think and believe.

Yeah, I used to cynically think whitey was the sole target of the character assassination and incited violence for political deviance, but now I see alot of various groups suffer from such controlled social conditioning. as well. Once I seen the Zionist front group the "Anti Defamation League" (of B'nai B'Brith) denounce the Pope for 'hate speech' for claiming homosexuality is a sin, and after seeing their influence on governmental authorities to block that web site in public libraries as a 'restricted hate speech site'- well, the legitimacy of the official majorities views on morality and Truth was forever shattered in my eyes.

So what the heck, may as well begin to revel in persecution. Better now than later. Better to suffer for standing for what you believe than submissively trying to meet an ever shifting and lowering standard of whats 'unofficially' acceptable. Especially since it never stays the same. What's 'right' today wasn't 'right' 20 years ago, and probably won't be 'right' 20 years from today...give me something solid and unchanging to stand on and believe. If the drones kill me for it, so be it...death may be better than living in the delusional reality they create.
