

Unconditional Love

It is something that does not limit or qualify an agreement or offer. There is no prerequisite or urgent requirements for this feeling which animates a person who is genuinely fond of someone. This unexplainable emotion that's right and true, demanding great toil and effort. It is shared with friends, neighbors, strangers, and an individual or group that is hostile toward another. It remains indefinitely in existence and in a particular state or course, continuing without intermission and seeming without end. There is nothing to prescribe or serve as a restricting boundaries. ^{to it} It permeate the universe and every sentient being. To exalt one person or thing above every other person or thing, you have restricted it. You have placed conditions on it. The only thing that serve to make ready the way for love is one must love one-self. No authority is granted, no sanction is needed to act or do it. So I am not asking you to love you. I am telling you, I love you, because it is without conditions.