I admire Chavez for when he called out President Bush that time on National TV.

calling him a Devil and Alcoholic haha!

I was like Woe! "who is this dude? He sure is bold, and I like him!" He wasn't afraid to speak his mind, despite the position he held!!

I was like he said something the white folks would not admit and say and something the black folks would not dare to say due to their positions they may have held, in the public eye, or cooperate job etc.

In people's mind, they knew George W. Bush wasn't no good and was drunk the whole time while running the country and was evil by the way he handled the black children and families during the Katrina storm outbreak down in New Orleans, Louisiana 2005. Then here comes Chavez, Blasting Bush on public TV for all to hear. I love it. That instant he became a hero in my eyes. I too, admired his confrontational, domineering, gangsta-like style. Mr. Chavez had much spunk and didn't talk no mess, particularly of George W. Bush. haha. I think honestly, if he would have caught Bush off somewhere he would've whooped him hahaha!

Populist hero, U.S. thorn, Venezuela's Chávez dies

By Frank Bajak

CARACAS, VENEZUELA – President Hugo Chávez, the fiery populist who declared a socialist revolution in Venezuela, crusaded against U.S. influence and championed a leftist revival across Latin America, died Tuesday at age 58 after a nearly two-year bout with cancer.

Chávez's departure alters the political balance in Venezuela, the fourth-largest foreign oil supplier to the United States.

During his more than 14 years in office, Chávez proved a polarizing figure.

With the president's death, the constitution says that the nation should "proceed to a new election" within 30 days, and that the vice president should take over in the meantime. The election is likely to pit Maduro, whom Chávez designated as his political successor, against Henrique
