

buhogrunon: Yeah, I never mentioined "human" sacrifice. I think I pretty clearly stated "living being". Perhaps I should have underlined it for you? living being. like that? meaning any living being...bull, goat... something with a life force inside of it...

Have you ever heard of the National Theosophical Society? They have a ton of books on this type of stuff...Occult, anciebt religions, even current mystical religions...

Anyways, I can't think of the author/scholar, he's wriften a ton of books, originally they're all in Italian but they sell translations, I want to say the guys last name is Evola. Does that ring a bell? You have a search engine, you can figure it out better than I can.

I usually don't get into all that occult/Freemasonry BS, but someone I came across awhile back did, so I read some of his works..he's very thorough in his research and footnotes all his sources throughout.

Anyways, thast where I got the info. Next time K come across someone with that taste I'll recheck the book out so I can give you the title of the book along with the page and line number to refute your bull.

Coincidentally, the sacrifice, could, in addition to other sacrifices, havde been human.

alright buhogrunon, take it easy out there....
