

- NF2a -

Voice 12

Thank you for the kind words. The shock has worn off, the air no longer tastes of rot. I am no longer in love with a razor wire woman. I'd find myself scratching at my wounds in order to relive long dead moments I've shared with my soon to be ex wife. I have begun to heal, I think the brutality of my wife just sending the divorce papers has allowed me to see past her pretty facade. I sadly have not had any contact with my daughters because of the divorce, I know they will write me when they are able to. I have begun to study Buddhism because it's a perfect way of living for self-realization. I have begun to have contentment with myself for the first time in my life.

As soon as my divorce is final I am going to put my name and picture on a few Pen Pal Places in hope of finding a female friend who knows maybe my future wife.

Thanks again for your kind words.

I am sending a poem I wrote about my divorce hope you enjoy and look forward to hearing from you again

PS. Is my picture still on my blog?

Sincerely

Roland Stoecker Jr

Roland Stoecker Jr

4/1/13