

the palestinian struggle is a internationalist pole, struggles related to the palestinian struggle are radical workers rights movements, progressive political movements & national liberation movements, radical workers rights movements, & progressive political movements tend to be white, just as national liberation movements tend to be non white, a issue is can there be national liberation movements with in radical workers rights movements & progressive political movements? an example of this is the russian progressive political movement solidarity with the chechen struggle, another example of this is the radical workers rights movement in spain solidarity with the basque separatist movement, post for <http://betweenthebars.org/blogs/1491>