

Religion

Since I been in prison I've had a back and forth relationship with God and trying to find what religion can do to help the quality of my life. At one point I was heavily into the church and had a major role in it at a prison I was at. I suffered alot of loses in my life at the time and gradually fell back from religion all together.

At time I find myself hurting so much and I see so much evilness and pain, I think to myself " Is this what God really had planned for anyones life." My search for God and religion has been at a stand still mainly because I've given up hope in so many things except the things I can control on my own.

So many people have lied to me and so many people have misled me that I feel like now I'm at a point in my life where I must think and believe in myself. I feel like if I let myself down then it wont be as bad as being let down by people or a Religion I trusted.

Spiritually I'm totally lost and I'm unsure of what to believe in terms of religion but I ask you this...Can someone live a good and righteous life without being a part of a certain religion? If so then I think that is what I desire to do because in the end I just want to live a decent life.

I'd love to hear your feed back on this :
