

Still Seeking Mentors

I posted a post about seeking mentors but it came out kinda blurry so I posted another one and never got any feedback so here I am posting another one. One of the things I struggle with the most is being and hanging around the wrong people when I'm out there in the free world. My mission this time around is to meet men and women of different social standings and backgrounds who be willing to step up as mentors in my life.

I know it may seem like I'm a little old to be looking for people to get advice and direction from but my "best" thinking got me put in prison for the last 11 years... I could really use some advice and guidance. I've written Dr. Phil, Judge Mathis, and various community leaders and have yet to receive any responses:(. Now I'm just reaching out to all of you... I'll be home in the next year and I just wanna make it out there.

If you are willing to be a mentor to me or know anyone who would be a good one then I encourage a response to this post from you or them. Take care and I hope to hear from you soon.
