

my individual/personal situation is that of a target in the domestic war on crime as a difficult & criminal individual, my individual/personal situation is that of being an enemy in a genocidal race & class war with a global entrenched intractable society, system, its institutions, its social, economic, political, & military aspects, i see the boston marathon bombing situation happening on the tv news, & i wonder did the bombers & their victims deserve each other, i don't know if the bombers & their victims deserved each other, i know in today these guards at this prison killing me under whatever pretext they would put forth, this societies position will be i deserved to be killed because i'm a prisoner, or with the way racism is in this society i deserved to be killed because i'm black, or with the way classism is in this society i deserved to be killed because i'm lower class, so i see the boston marathon bombing situation happening on the tv news, but that is happening with a society that is my race & class enemy, so i do not look at that situation from a moral perspective, i look at that situation from a tactical perspective, to understand the dynamics & ramifications of the use of force, because the use of force will be involved in any racial & class justice advancement i may affect, on a individual/personal basis i incline to the defensive use of force, but i know that war is atrocious, i look at as a example of defensive revolution, revolution's in east timor, malaysia, nepal, india, south africa, namibia, & cuba, & i have been involved in different ways in some of these revolution's, war at present has a very atrocious nature, in that the most atrocious forms of warfare have come to the fore, and being impractical in advocating defensive revolution, I envision a extremely dynamic social revolution with broad ramifications, the primary strategy of the system is to use the weight of the system against opposition, the grand strategy of the system is to co-opt opposition to the system, the system can not be effectively opposed without countering the weight of the system, & the system can not be effectively opposed without countering the system's effort to co-opt opposition to the system, I advocate for a social revolutionary party to co-ordinate national, transnational & international general strikes & wild cat strikes with a focus on sustaining strikers.

post for <http://betweenthebars.org/blogs/1491>